

09:03:38 From Bill McCallum : You have to keep an eye on the waiting room if it is enabled.

09:03:53 From Bill McCallum : Or you can just disable it.

09:03:58 From Bill McCallum : Bush fires here

09:11:42 From Bill McCallum : I agree, Naremburn was scary

09:13:47 From Bill McCallum : He used to tell us stories about his drunken weekend parties.

09:14:26 From Steve Garlick : Anyone recall the name of the Maths master that wielded the quiver of canes?

09:16:42 From Bill McCallum : Ward and Harris are the only other maths teachers I remember. Conservation club, so probably not wielding canes.

09:17:19 From Neale : There was a Snitch who was handy with a cane, but I think he was a Science teacher.

09:17:30 From Steve Garlick : I think he was the master, and was from New Zealand with a big black moustache

09:17:51 From Ken Morrey : Mr Ormsby

09:18:00 From Steve Garlick : that's it!

09:18:46 From Neale : Keith was running with the wrong crowd at NSHBS if he couldn't find any drugs.

09:19:07 From Steve Garlick : yes to that

09:19:36 From adam : I think he was a former NZ weight lifting champion or something similar. Good credentials for caning everyone who missed detention

09:20:03 From Bill McCallum : The Hole

09:20:07 From Steve Garlick : It was a kind of trial of courage. If you flinched, you got more cuts

09:24:39 From Neale : The Hole. We used to think we were unobserved in the Hole, but apparently they were marking a roll, and the cigarette smoke drifted up through the floorboards into the Maths staff room, where the teachers could also hear us singing "Today's Friday,..."

09:25:55 From Steve Garlick : I recall dope circles over in the park next to the oval

09:27:27 From Colin Cussel : Rickard became a senior policeman. I can't remember much of him at school except a teacher yelling "Rickard!" and throwing him out of class.

09:29:27 From Neale : So Keith, are you saying you recovered spontaneously from depression? You're burying the lead.

09:31:52 From Steve Garlick : Just like me.

09:37:11 From james : Sorry Chat caught in Cyber Space ,Fascinated about La Perouse , grew up ,the road in Kensington ,La Perouse was an indigenous area , any thoughts re this aspect .

09:39:20 From Colin Cussel : Should have called in Les Norton

09:40:26 From Steve Garlick : How did dealing with this level of violence impact on you?

09:47:14 From Bill McCallum : You had me worried there.

09:58:26 From Adrian Graham : sometimes its good to do something "different" but fun. I work at MCG and other events usually spruiking.

10:00:01 From Paul Fookes : I remember Keith as a great person in Naremburn Primary School.

10:00:55 From Ken Morrey : I remember Keith as a skinny very fast bowler!

10:02:57 From Neale : These interviews are great. It's so easy to maintain the general-purpose mask that we've developed, and we see that when we meet briefly. When you guys are prepared to take the mask off and show us the complexity beneath, it's an intense experience. Thanks for doing this. Moving and fascinating.

10:03:13 From Bill McCallum : +1

10:08:18 From Colin Cussel : Thanks for the very deep sharing of your life Keith? I am amazed that we were at boys school together where I remember being on guard a bit, fearing that someone would hit me. Now we are a bunch of crusty old men able to share deeply

10:08:23 From Neale : So that strip-joint scene we see in every single cop drama is real? Why wasn't I told?

10:09:55 From Neale : Any thoughts on a solution to this "us and them" division that develops? Anyone? We could prevent civil war in the US if we come up with something. Might help here too.

10:12:07 From Neale : Another one not to say on the death bed: I wish I had rejected more temptations.

10:13:17 From Steve Garlick : My solution is an individual one: learn to live with an open heart.

10:13:32 From Bill McCallum : Thanks Keith

10:13:44 From Steve Garlick : Thanks Keith, honoured to meet you

10:13:56 From Neale : Thanks Keith. That was great.

10:14:31 From pshel : Thanks, Keith, for being so open and generous.

10:15:01 From Adrian Graham : Thanks Keith
